FROM THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

Mobilizing Action Against Corruption

MAAC Activity Surveys

- Two types of surveys
 - Annual Household Corruption Survey
 - Bi-Annual Public Official & Business Owner Survey
- Triangulation
 - World Bank Institute “triangulation” methodology will be utilized to compare findings of the Household and Public Officials & Business Owner surveys
 - As a result...
 - The extent and sources of institutional corruption dysfunction will be diagnosed;
 - Reform priorities will be set;
 - Policy dialogues will be shaped; and
 - The economic and social costs of corruption will be quantified.

Objectives of the Household Corruption Survey

The general objectives of the Household Corruption Survey is to solicit information on the following:

- Perceptions of corruption;
- Personal experience with corruption;
- Awareness of anti-corruption initiatives; and
- Media use and information sources on corruption.

2008 Armenia Household Corruption Survey

- MAAC; Casals&Associates
- Survey firm: Caucasus Research Resource Centers (CRRC-Armenia) / EPF
- Fieldwork dates: 21 September - 6 October
- Sample Size: 1 549 respondents
- Margin of error: $\pm 2.49\%$
- Sample Area Coverage: All Marzes in Armenia
- Sampling Method: Multistage cluster sampling with preliminary stratification by urban/rural
- Weights: by age and gender

Summary of the Main Survey Findings

- Six in ten Armenians are dissatisfied with the overall situation in the country
- More than eight in ten consider corruption to be a serious problem facing the nation
- Only a minority of 17 % believes the level of corruption has increased during the last year
- Corruption is perceived to be common in institutions and public offices
- Corruption is seen most severe among high-ranking public officials

Summary of the Main Survey Findings (contd.)

- Corruption is quite common in different sectors and public services
- Demand for bribes is highest with the traffic police, customs authorities, state-guaranteed free birth assistance, and healthcare in general
- The majority of Armenians are likely to continue to pay bribes
- Most Armenians are reluctant to report corrupt acts
- Few Armenians have been assuming a proactive role in the fight against corruption

Summary of the Main Survey Findings (contd.)

- Awareness of NGOs engaged in anti-corruption work is poor
- Slight majority of Armenian would not, rather than would approach an NGO-run anti-corruption center
- The third of respondents is aware of the government's anti-corruption initiatives
- Media and word of mouth are the main information sources on corruption
- The Public TV (H1) and Shant TV are the most frequently watched channels; Shant TV is more trusted than H1
